Sawabona (I See You)

With gratitude to my friend Ciona Rouse who reminded me of these words

Music by: Jason Shelton

"Sawabona" is a traditional Zulu greeting, roughly translated as "I see you." The traditional response is "sikhona," which means "I am here." This greeting and response communicates the essential connectedness of all beings, succinctly captured by the Zulu word "ubuntu"- "I am because we are."

I would suggest the accompanist begin by playing the vocal parts, and shift to the written accompaniment once everyone is singing strongly. Repeat as needed, growing in strength and commitment with each iteration.
